Since, in that State, a nomination by our party is taneaders throughout the Union to know of what stuff the successor of Gov. J. J. McRae is made.

Gov. McWillie (for we may well so far anticipate the Oc tober elections as to call him governor) is a native of South Carolina, from near Camden. Having removed thence to Mississippi, he was, in 1847, nominated by the democracy of Madison county as their candidate for the lower house of the State legislature. His party was then in an almost hopeless minority in that county, but, thoughtless of self, he accepted the nomination. Though, as a matter of course, defeated, it was by a smaller ma jority of the whigs than usual; and the seeds he then swed have now ripened into harvest—the county is

In 1848 he was presidential elector for his district upon the democratic ticket.

In 1849 he was nominated for Congress, and after a arduous summer campaign against a talented and wily foe, was triumphant where few, if any, of our party had hoped to succeed.

He was thus a member of the memorable Thirty-first Congress, where, side by side with his party colleagues, he stood the brunt of those fierce sessions

Thus endeared to a grateful people, he was renominated in 1851; but in the panic created by H. S. Foote he was defeated. Yet even then, so great was his popularity, that he ran ahead of his party some one thousand Even Mr. Foote was forced to acknowledge that had the elections have been two weeks removed. Mr. McWillie, as well as all others of the delegation to the Thirty-first Congress, would have been successful.

in 1853 he was nominated for the State senate, and, though unwillingly thus a candidate, and though again opposed from the stump by Mr. Foote in person, (then a candidate for a higher office,) he was elected.

In 1855 he, unlike some others, did not bow down at night or by day to the new Juggernaut of know-nothingism and crave slyly, while professing democracy, its kind indulgence. On the contrary, although no candidatelesiring, as ever, the retiracy of his beautiful "Kirkwood" home, in the healthy hills, rather than the pomp "-he left his peaceful plantation for the stu and all the summer, throughout all the State, helped his party leaders deal the Thugs those Thor strokes beneath which they soon died in their culvert-cradles -never having been allowed, as in other States, to leave them.

In 1857, June 23, we find him the nominee of his party for governor of a proud Commonwealth; and the des of October will show him the governor elect.

In conclusion, we may add that he is well worthy to succeed the present brilliant four years' administration of the almost peerless McRae. A gentleman of wealth and refinement, generous and hospitable almost to an excess. and with a wife and family well worthy of him, he will fill as well socially the splendid executive mansion as he can but fill administratively the executive chair.

[Correspondence of the Louisville Courier.] THE CANVASS IN KENTUCKY .- MESSRS. HOLT AND MARSHALL.

WESTPORT, (Ky.,) June 20, 1857.

Pursuant to previous arrangement, Messrs. Holt and Marshall met the people here to-day, and discussed at length the political issues of the canvass; and, without the fear of successful contradiction, we can inform your readers that rurely, indeed, if ever, was a political, military, or any other sort of gentleman more completely for on the stump than Colonel Marshall was on this oc-

In conclusion, will the voters of the seventh district return Mr. Marshall, who represents a powerless faction, to Coagress for the purpose of clogging and perhaps of varring upon the administration, thereby giving aid and comfort to the black-republicans? We honestly think you will do no such thing. On the contrary, let every democrat and old-line whis in the district do his whole duty, which is only to give his vote and influence to our gallant standard-bearer, and all will be well. others, is represented by the last overland mail tumount to an election, it may be acceptable to your be spreading through the country, and is regarded with considerable alarm both in India and in England. The movement is altogether confined to the Hindoosthe Mohammedan soldiers taking no part in it. The first cause of the insubordination was the nature of the grease served out to the troops to make their cartridges slip asily down the barrels of the new Enfield rifles, with which they are armed, in place of the old musket. It appears that, contrary to the government order, which prescribes mutton fat to be employed to grease the cartridges, the contractors used pig's or bullock's fat, because it was cheaper, and more easily procured; and that when this became known, it created the most intense ill-feeling both among the Mohammedans, who have a religious horror of the pig, and consider contact with it in any shape as pollution, and the Hindoos, who reverence the oullock, and consider the profane use of its body as the reatest possible sacrilege. greatest possible sacrilege. The Mohammedans were easily quieted, but the Hindoos were not to be appeased. They conspired together for the selzure of the defences of Calcutta and the treasure which is deposited there, and strove to arouse the religious fanaticism of the Brahmin population by telling them that bullock's fat was used by express order of the English for the purpose of the selzure of the English for the purpose of the selzure of the English for the purpose of the selzure of the English for the purpose of the selzure of the English for the purpose of the selzure of the English for the purpose of the selzure of the English for the purpose of the selzure of the English for the purpose of the selzure of the The Mohammedans were ompelling them to become converts to Christianity ugh the Indian government issued an order to discontinue the use of the objectionable grease, and ordering the substitution of some other compound which could not offend any Hindoo or Mohammedan scruple, the Sepoys were not satisfied. They then refused to touch the cartridge, because they believed that the paper of which it was made contained animal matter. At Barrackpore, Meerut, Lucknow, and Umballa, the soldiers refused to obey the orders of their officers, and in some instances even went so far as to assault them on parade; and by the last accounts the spirit of disaffection was extending like an epidemic northwards, demoralizing more or less every garrison of India." The most energetic and evere measures are being taken by the government to arrest the movement and punish the ring-leaders; but it is feared that the cartridge is the pretext, and not the cause, of the Hindoo disaffection. The steps which have been taken, by order of the East India Company, to do away with the immolation of widows by the Suttee, the aughter of female infants, and other cruel religious rights of the Hindoos, to which they attach a superstitions importance, and the rapid growth of European improvements and civilization throughout the country, sing the gradual extinction of Hindoo prejudices, are supposed to have aroused the fanatical among the Sepoys to attempt to resist or retard a system of national and social improvement which they are cunning enough to see must ultimately prevail over their ignorance and

In a country like India, where the dominant race is but mere handful of men compared to the millions of the native population, and where the main support of the rule of the foreign minority is the soldiery taken from the native majority, the consequence of disaffection and revolt among those soldiers must necessarily be extremely dangerous. Hitherto, whenever discontent or rebellion showed itself in the ranks of the East India Company's army, it has been easily suppressed, because the army being composed of two antagonistic creeds, the Mohammedan Hindoo, the members of one denomination have alvays aided the government in punishing and suppressing the turbulence and disobetience of the other; and when, as in the case of the Santal rebellion in 1855, a dispute ook place between the two rival religious, the presence of the European troops prevented the native soldiers from taking part in the rebellion. The present troubles being confined altogether to the Hindoo soldiers, it is supposed that the mutiny will be suppressed and further disasters prevented by the fidelity of the Mohammedan troops in aid of the European regiments; and it is hoped that the assurance given by the governor-general, that it is not the intention of the government to interfere with the religious prejudices of the people, but, on the contrary, to defend each sect in the undisturbed exercise of its eligion, will calm the excitement of the Hindoo population, and prevent a general outbreak in aid of the disaf-

A METHODIST BISHOP REBUKES POLITICAL PREACHING.

At the late conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church for East Maine, Bishop Morris, being about to anounce the appointment of preachers to their several stations and circuits, gave his views-very briefly and in very kindly terms-upon the interference of ministers of he Gospel with political affairs. We deem the present a fit time for giving his renorks to our readers. The political excitement which brought so many New England clergymes into the partisan field has passed away, and inisters and laymen are tooking with calmness and candor to the influences which have resulted from political preaching. They find churches divided and distracted, pews deserted, treasuries empty, and the hearts of the people cold and comfortless. Some of them, with commendable devotion to the Christian cause, have set about the work necessary to restore the good feeling which prerailed in other years; and many who had been driven from their houses of worship by the parsisan abuse of their ministers have been brought back to their public devotions, and are again hoping for a season of religious enjoyment. Perhaps, at such a time, both minister and people will derive pleasure and profit from the gentle counsels in the remarks above referred to. In the course of them, Bishop Morris said:

"I deem it not unimportant or out of place to address a few works to you, my brethren, upon a subject which is attracting considerable attention at the present time—namely, as to how far a minister of the Gospel ought to take part in the politics of the day. When a minister goes into his pulpit he finds his congregation composed of men of different political parties; and if he publicly becomes the partisan of one side or the other, there will of necessity spring up a coldness towards him in a part of the congregation, which will very much di-minish his influence. I feel convinced, from what I have observed, that the only result that can be expected from a minister taking part in the political contests and discussions of the day will be to eagender strife and hard feeling in his congregation.

"But some may ask whether we are not citizens like ing in his congregation.

"But some may ask whether we are not citizens lika other men, and have not duties to perform as such! Mest certainly we are, and I trust I have not proved recreant to the obligations resting upon me as a citizen, although I have not, for the forty years that I have been in the ministry, ever entered a political meeting or spent above five minutes at any election. I have always made it a point to go to the polis at the most quiet time of the day, when there was likely to be the least excitement, to deposite my ballot in an unostentations manner, and return home. I have never seen the time when I thought I was called upon as a citizen to do more than this. I know not how it may be with others, but I have always found enough to do in the duties of my calling. I am willing to let the 'potsherds strive with the potsherds,' but prefer for myself to attend to the duties devolving upon me as a minister of Christ. I recollect an anceolote of a Methodist brother who was stationed to preach the Gospel to the people in 'Fountain Head circuit,' near the Hermitage of the late President Jackson, in the exciting political times of his second election, Party zeal was just then at its height, and each party wanted every one to be on its side. They sought out the newly-acrived minister and eagerly inquired of him whose side he was on? 'I am on the side of the Lord and Fountain Head Circuit,' was the reply. Which of the candidates do you intend to you see the second of the lord of the pound of the provision of the provisi was the reply. Which of the candidates do you intend to vote for " 'I trust I shall be found on my kness praying to God for the conversion of sinners and the upbuilding of Zion in Fountain Head Circuit. However they might question the devoted minister, he would wheely answer that he meant to do his duty faithfully as a minister of Christ in Fountain Head Circuit. In conclusion, let me

MURDER OF A POLICEMAN.—At a late hour on Saturday night a disturbance arose in Carberry's court, a street which runs from Catharine street, below Fifth. It seems thay in great agony.

The coroner summoned a jury, and held an inquest. The testimony taken was voluminous, but had little bearing upon the case. The inquest stands adjourned until Tuesday, at which time it is expected that further stimony will be elicited .- Philadelphia Gazette.

A lad of twelve years of age, son of Jacob Reinhart was fishing in Upton, Pennsylvania, a few days since, when a black snake suddenly whipped itself twice around his body, with such force as to throw him into the water, which was deep. A pole was thrust down to him, which struck him, and which he had presence of mind enough immediately to grasp, when he was drawn up. An at-tempt to grapple the snake proved unsuccessful, and re-sulted only in the operators getting their fingers bit. So tight was the reptile coiled that it was necessary to turn a knife edgewise and use force to get it between the boy's clothes and the make's skin; this accomplished, the sharp instrument was turned, and a vigorous two-handed cut severed the unwelcome living girdle in twain. The snake was four and a half feet long.

While thus intent upon securing some game another hunter came near making game of him, for, happening to see what he supposed to be a fine deer through the thicket, the new-comer took deliberate aim at it and fired. Fortunately the ball missed the counterfeit deer, but it succeeded in "frightening him out of his skin." eded in "frightening him out of his skin."

A San Case.—Two years ago a beautiful Irish girl, named Ellen McCauliffe, about twenty years of age, came to this country with some friends, in advance of her parents. The understanding was that this country was a good place for girls to find employment, and that Ellen should save up her earnings, and as soon as practicable assist her parents to join her in the land of freedom and plenty. But soon after arriving here she fell a victim to a lingering consumption; and, but for the true Irish friends that she came over with, she would not have had a home to pine and die in. She died on Wednesday night last at the house of one of these friends, on 41 street, on the Island. Her only regret was that she could not live to look once more upon her parents. Sad, indeed, was the fate of the poor girl; and sad will be the news to her fond parents that their beloved and heroic daughter who came to the New World to prepare the way for them, lies beneath the sod of a strange land, and that they will never look upon her again.

The Refrigerator,-The Arctic.

The Refrigerator,—The Arctic.

WOULD invite notice to the advertisement in another column of SANFORD'S PATENT ARCTIC REFRIGERATION, an article worthy the perticular attention of housekeepers, being handsomely finished, forming an attractive piece of furniture for a duning-room. All other articles commonly called refrigueacers, but more properly not houses, are so poorly made that shey must be kept out of sight in the cellar, or some super place.

The Arctic is provided with a wisser juri and movable shelves, on abling the comparisons to be greatly varied, so as to accommodate numerous small articles or give space for one large one.

One of the many improvements just added in the providing each compariment with a distinct lock and key, so that one or more can be keep private, whilst the rest is open to common use, which improvement will be duly appreciated by many housekeepers who have suffered from pillering domestips.
